

Bladium Personal Trainer Policy

Bladium, Inc. does not employ individuals as personal trainers. In exchange for a fee to access Bladium's facilities, Bladium permits personal trainers to utilize Bladium's facilities and equipment to perform personal training services for Bladium members. Bladium makes no representation as to the experience, certification level or competence of the personal trainers. Thus, it is incumbent upon each Bladium member who seeks to utilize the services of such personal trainer(s) to ascertain such information on their own. Bladium does not make any warranty or representation regarding any results that the member may receive from the use of a personal trainer, and therefore none should be implied.

Bladium retains no control over the amounts charged by personal trainers, or how personal trainers collect charges from members, or over any aspect of the financial relationship between a personal trainer and a member. Bladium does not collect any portion of a fee charged to a member for personal training services. Therefore, Bladium is not responsible for issuing any refunds to members for personal training services, or assisting with issues arising from payments to personal trainers.

Bladium makes no warranty or representation over the safety of utilizing the services of a personal trainer. Members must educate themselves regarding all risks, and understand that injuries and physical changes may occur from engaging the services of a personal trainer. Accordingly, members must take sole responsibility for such dangers and any injuries and changes that may occur.